The Lost Land...

A world where time has no meaning - and evil knows no bounds. Torn from a world long gone, the time traveling warrior Turok has found himself thrust into a savage land torn by conflict. An evil overlord known as 'The Campaigner' seeks to shred the fabric of time and rule the universe using an ancient artifact known as 'The Chronoscepter'. The Chronoscepter was shattered thousands of years ago in an effort to keep it from falling into evil hands. The Campaigner has constructed a massive focusing array which he plans to use to magnify and pervert the power of the Chronoscepter in order to shatter the barriers between the ages and rule the universe. Turok has vowed to find the eight pieces of the Chronoscepter spread throughout the Lost Land and put an end to The Campaigner's evil plot...

"There are approximately a half dozen bandits, including their leader," Gatsby says. "Only the leader appears to be a Superlative of Villainous Character. She styles herself the Bandit Queen. Her abilities are, alas, unknown."

"She's struck what, seven times already?" Orchid asks. "Surely someone must have seen what she can do."

"I should instead say that reports of her abilities are varied," Gatsby corrects himself. "Some have said she is invisible. Others, that she moves with incredible speed. Still more claim that she throws lightning from the palms of her hands. The inconsistency in reports makes it difficult to advise you on a strategy."

You've been thinking most of the day about how to approach the problem. You've identified two likely strategies. Either one has its risks and advantages, but you've decided to...

- Find the bandit hideout and strike it directly; a simple approach leaves less room for error.
- Find the bandit hideout and strike it directly; it's the more honorable approach.
- Pose as wealthy travelers to draw out the bandits; better they attack us than innocent travelers.
- Pose as wealthy travelers to draw out the bandits; it's easier to find them if they come to us.
